Dart Valley nature reserve

The place to explore one of Devon's most dramatic river gorges

Map of Dart Valley

Walk next to the River Dart's tumbling white water, through oak woodland and butterfly glades.

Walking at Dart Valley:
The middle sections of the nature reserve contain steep sections. Paths are indistinct and rough. Care needs to be taken.

How to get to Dart Valley nature reserve

The reserve's main entrance point is at New Bridge. Exit A38 following signs to Dart Valley Country Park. Continue past the Park, via Holne Bridge to New Bridge. The car park is immediate left after the bridge (map ref SX 710 708). A track from the far end of the car park leads into the reserve.

Wildlife to watch for

Watch for salmon leaping through the white water as they make their way upriver to spawn.

The sunny slopes of the reserve below Aish Tor give you a chance to see high brown fritillaries, one of the UK's rarest butterflies.
